Sensational Snow - Winter Inspiration!

Crisp, clean and sparkling - freshly fallen snow is one of the most beautiful things to behold. A blanket of white covering the brown remains of fall evokes a feeling of renewal. A definite mark of the changing seasons, it never truly feels like winter until you see those first flakes fall - that is, if you live in a climate where snow is possible! Just the sight of snow can help to make you feel all warm and cozy as thoughts of hibernation come to mind. Love it or hate it, you can't deny the beauty of snow.

The crisp scent of snow is another positive factor of the white, fluffy stuff. Heading out into the snow, one can't help but sigh after taking a lungful of the clean, cold scent. It is a scent that is often heavy with memories. It can take you back to your childhood where you played for hours in the cold without thought. It makes you pull your jacket/blanket/hat closer to your body instinctual to prepare yourself for the impending chill. According to allexperts.com, "Some of the chemicals that can be in snow are: Nitrogen dioxide, formaldehyde, nitric acid, dimethyl sulphide and sulphate and methanesulphonate. All of these have distinctive odors and the combination is probably what you smell." Though, like most scents that evoke various emotional responses like campfire or fresh chocolate chip cookies, the 'smell of snow' really is tied to a more visceral response that causes the nostalgia we feel as the first days of winter roll through.

These two characteristics make it prime as inspiration for your winter collections. Producing a whole line full of crisp white, cool blue and full of sparkle products can provide a very visually interesting line that would be perfect to show off at shows, your shop or online. Using snow-based scents will allow you to further connect with your customers to provide a look and scent they are intensely in-tune with during the winter. Especially if you're in a warmer climate, pushing snow-based items will help those who associate the holidays with snow to get into the holiday spirit through your products. It also is a great way to celebrate the holiday season without paying homage to one specific holiday that occurs during this time. It's a nice neutral way to seasonalize your line by providing a type of product any culture can enjoy.

Having trouble figuring out just what to make? Look no further than the following pages for tons of inspiration. We have thought long and hard to come up with the perfect products to not only recreate the look and scent of this great element, but also bring up those feelings it conveys. We have even more recipes on our website so you can browse around for more ideas and the kits that are made for these recipes to quickly shape up your winter line. - 1 Piece Crafter's Choice Crimson Sparkle Soap Color Bar

- 1 Crafter's Choice Round Basic Glossy Silicone Mold
- 1 Silicone Set 2 Snowman & Christmas Trees Mold
- .1 Ounce Crafter's Choice Iridescent Super Sparkle Glitter

Equipment

- Microwave or Double Boiler
- Soap Cutter
- Scale to Weigh Soap
- Glass Pyrex Bowls
- Soap Thermometer
- Mixing Spoons
- Plastic Dropper
- Spray Bottle with alcohol(for spritzing)
- Grater or Potato Peeler

- 1. NOTE: If you are making these products for sale, good manufacturing practices recommend you wear a hairnet, gloves and a mask. We also recommend a clean apron.
- 2. Weigh 12 oz. of extra clear soap and cut up into chunks. Place in a large glass pyrex cup.
- 3. Cut one red soap cube in half. Place one half in bowl with clear soap.
- 4. Heat in microwave until soap has completely melted. Remove and stir to be sure all soap has melted.
- 5. Add 10 ml. (2 tsps.) of fragrance oil to red soap and stir well.
- 6. Pour red soap into mold dividing between the 6 round cavities. Let soap set up.
- 7. Weigh 6 oz. of white soap base. Cut up into chunks and place in glass pyrex cup.
- 8. Take one green soap color cube and cut into four pieces. Take one piece and place in glass cup with white soap.
- 9. Heat soap in microwave until melted and soap color block has dissolved. Remove and stir well to be sure all has melted.
- 10. To green soap, add 2 ml. of fragrance oil and stir well.
- 11. Pour into Christmas tree soap mold. It is not necessary to fill tree molds to the top. Making trees different depths allows for better placement.
- 12. To make 3 trees for each soap, you will need to repeat above step once the trees have hardened and have been removed from the mold.
- 13. If necessary, reheat green soap if hardened so it can be poured into the molds.
- 14. Weigh 15 oz. of white soap and cut into chunks. Place in glass pyrex cup and heat in microwave until melted.
- 15. Add 9 ml. of fragrance oil and blend into soap.
- 16. Spritz tops of red soap in round molds generously with rubbing alcohol.
- 17. Before pouring white soap, check that temperature of soap is no higher than 125°F so the red does not bleed into the white.
- 18. Pour white soap over the red until all 6 cavities are poured. Spritz top of soap with alcohol to release any air bubbles.
- 19. When white soap is almost firm, spritz the bottom of the trees with alcohol and push down into the white base. You may need to hold them in place for a minute or so until they can stand on their own.
- 20. Grate 4 oz. of white soap base using a cheese grater or potato peeler. Sprinkle white soap curls around the trees for each soap.
- 21. Melt about 2 oz. of clear soap and drizzle this gently over the soap curls to hold them in place. Then immediately sprinkle them with glitter.
- 22. When soaps have completely set up, carefully remove from mold.
- 23. For packaging, we suggest placing in a cello bag and tie with matching ribbons.
- 24. Label soap accordingly.

Sugar, Spice and Everything Nice!

Warmth and comfort are very strong themes that emerge with the start of winter. As the outdoors gets colder, we turn inside to get relief with all things comfortable. From warm meals to woolen blankets, we stock up on all the favorites that will get us through these chilly months.

One of the most comforting things one can do is surround themselves with warm and inviting scents. When it comes to winter, more often than not, that means scents basking in the spicy warmth of cinnamon, clove, pumpkin, vanilla and the like.

These scents typically fall within the 'Oriental' scent category and more specifically the 'Gourmand' section of that category. "The Gourmand fragrances are a relatively new category, with the concept of basing fragrances on edible notes. A gourmand scent may contain notes such as spices, honey, vanilla, chocolate, amber and cinnamon. Gourmand scents are usually "comfy" and delicious and wear nicely in the cooler seasons."*

Relaxing with a large cup of spicy chai latte or a glass of mulled wine at the end of the day can be the perfect way to put the cozy back in your life during these cold months. Using the scents derived from these spices in bath, body and home products throughout the winter can be a great way to get the same effect. People turn to these scents as the temperatures drop and you can ensure that your products are the perfect thing to keep them cozy all season long.

While home scents are a very popular way to gain that feeling of warmth and comfort throughout your hibernation chamber, (a.k.a. your home) what happens when one inevitably has to venture out into that cold? How can one gain this feeling in the midst of the swirling snow and biting wind? The easiest solution would be to use bath and body products to cover yourself in your favorite warm spice scent and for those of us in this industry, that means creating a full line of products dedicated to creating that feeling for your customers with each product. A warm pumpkin spice lotion on your skin could be the perfect compliment to a chilly winter sleigh ride. A sugar and spice scent of vanilla and cinnamon added to one's hair product or perfume can help banish the biting winter temperatures faster than anything.

Want more ideas on how to best use these scents to create the perfect winter comfort products? Then look no further than the following pages for the ideas, recipes, products and more to help get you started toward a warm spice product line that will last you and your customers all chilly winter long! Remember to shop Wholesale Supplies Plus for all of the ingredients needed to produce these products and for even more inspiration within our Recipe Library and Resource Center! Get ready for winter now and ensure that your customers are well-stocked with the products that will warm and comfort them through these chilly months!

- Large Mixing Bowl
- Microwave
- Mini-Mixer
- Mixing Utensils
- Plastic Beaker
- Safety Equipment(glasses, gloves, sleeves)
- Scale (to measure ingredients)
- Spatula
- Stick Blender

Directions

- This project and these instructions have been written for someone who has experience making soap and knows the potential dangers due to working with sodium hydroxide. It will not outline safety methods of working with dangerous chemicals, it is simply a soap recipe for advanced soapmakers.
- Put on your protective gear. This is very important since you will be working with an extremely caustic base that can and will burn you if you touch it. Noxious fumes are also released from the exothermic reaction that occurs when you mix the sodium hydroxide with water.
- Wear a face mask or leave the vicinity quickly after stirring the sodium hydroxide into the water. If you get any lye on your skin just wash it off quickly with copious amounts of cool water
- 4. Measure water and lye in separate containers. Very carefully, pour lye into water and stir until lye is dissolved.
- 5. Weigh oils and butter and place in microwave safe glass bowl. Microwave on high until butters are melted.
- (Our oil was getting too hot and the cocoa butter was still not melting, so we scooped out the cocoa butter into a cup and heated until it was melted before adding back to the rest of the oils.)
- 7. Prepare your orange colorant by taking about 2 tablespoons of oils and placing in a beaker. Add the Matte Yellow and Matte Red Pigment Powders and stir well. The Mini Mixer works great for this.
- 8. Prepare your fragrance oil in a beaker by measuring the FO and then adding the Vanilla Color Stabilizer. Stir very well.
- You will want the oils and lye water to be close to the same temperature when you pour them. At around 100°F, you can start soaping.

- 10. Place your blender in the oils and tap it on the bottom of the bowl to "burp" it and release any air bubbles.
- Pour the lye water over the shaft of the stick blender.
   Carefully blend your oils and lye water until the mixture comes to a very light trace.
- 12. Slowly add your fragrance oil while stirring the soap with a spatula.
- 13. NOTE: The Spiced Pumpkin fragrance oil causes the soap to turn orange. If you want the top of your soap to be very white, then wait until after you pour some soap into another cup to add the fragrance oil.
- 14. In a separate measuring cup, pour about 1 cup of traced soap. To the main pot, add the reserved oil that has been colored orange and stir well. Pour this into your loaf mold and then gently lift the mold and tap on the counter to release any air bubbles.
- 15. Add the Matte White Pigment Powder for Oil to the reserved soap in the measuring cup. Use the stick blender to incorporate, then use the spatula to make sure the color is completely stirred in.
- 16. Carefully pour this along the top of your loaf. You can now play with texture on the top, making it look like whipped cream, if you like. A sprinkle of Matte Brown Pigment Powder or Brown Mica Powder down the center of the loaf can look like sprinkled cinnamon.
- 17. Carefully insulate the sides of the loaf with a towel. Allow to sit overnight, uncovered.
- 18. The next morning, carefully unmold the loaf and slice into 8 one-inch pieces. Allow the bars to sit on a cooling rack for 4-6 weeks to cure fully.

- 3. Weigh 10 oz. of Three Butter soap. Cut up into chunks and place in Mix & Pour Funnel Pitcher.
- 4. Heat in microwave until soap has melted.
- 5. Carefully pour about 1 oz. of soap into each soap pop cavity. NOTE: It is very important to pour directly into the middle of soap cavity. If the soap gets on the sides of the mold, you will have white streaks on the side of the soap pop. The small spout on the funnel pitcher is perfect for this.
- 6. Spritz the inside of the cavities with alcohol to dissolve any surface bubbles. Let soap harden.
- 7. Weigh and separate the Honey Soap in equal halves. Place 16 oz. each in glass pyrex cups.
- 8. Taking the 2 plastic beakers, place 10 ml. of fragrance in each.
- 9. Since this fragrance has a vanilla content, it must be blended with the Vanilla Color Stabilizer to reduce darkening of the soap.
- 10. NOTE: Stabilizer will solidify in colder temperatures. If this happens, place bottle in hot water to liquefy.
- 11. To each beaker, add 5 ml. of Vanilla Color Stabilizer and mix. Allow mixture to sit for 5 minutes.
- 12. Melt Honey Soap in one of the glass cups. Add one beaker of fragrance/stabilizer mixture to soap and stir well.
- 13. Spritz the soap in 5 of the soap cavities with alcohol. Check the temperature of the melted soap to be sure it is no hotter than 125°F.
- 14. Stir the soap in the cup to create bubbles (as you would see in beer). Then carefully pour the soap into the 5 cavities filling to the top. Spritz the tops with alcohol.
- 15. Melt the remaining soap in the microwave. Add the other beaker of fragrance mixture and stir well.
- 16. Using the 1 ml (micro size) scoop, add 3 ml of the Brown Sparkle Mica Powder. Stir well.
- 17. Spritz the remaining cavities in the mold again with alcohol. Once the soap is at or below 125°F, pour into the last 5 cavities filling right to the top. Spritz, again, with alcohol.
- 18. Place the soap pop cover over the soap mold positioning so the slats in the top cover each soap cavity.
- 19. Carefully place a stick down into each cavity keeping it as straight as possible.
- 20. Allow soaps to complete set up and harden.
- 21. To unmold, do not pull on the sticks to pull out of the mold. Carefully pull the mold slightly away from the soap. Then, gently push up from the bottom until they are free from the mold or are pushed up far enough to grab hold of and pull the rest of the way out.
- 22. Package your soaps and enjoy!

Banish Dry Winter Skin!

Many agree that winter has a number of annoying qualities. The cold temperatures, the shorter days, or the scary snow storms can all be top contenders. However, many women will agree, the dry skin that comes with winter can be one of the more frustrating things to deal with during this time. Chapped lips, cracking hands, and itchy skin are not just annoying, but oftentimes painful symptoms of dry winter skin. Many search just about anywhere to get the relief they need to properly moisturize during these dry months.

Winter dry skin is often caused by a few different factors. The main one being increased time indoors with dry, indoor heat that strips the moisture from your skin. Another strong contender is hot baths or showers that are taken a few moments longer in the winter to help banish the cold from our bones. Frequent washing, in any season, will wash away the skin's protective layer of oil which will cause it to become dry. Plus, as water evaporates from your skin, it takes even more moisture with it. Combine these factors with the low humidity of winter and cold, whipping winds and you have the perfect formula for a season of constant dry skin.

Replacing the moisture in your skin is a necessity to relieve the itchy, rough skin you might gain if you leave it be. This is a particularly good season to break out the heavy-duty lotions and moisture-rich shower gels if you don't keep them within your line year-round. If you don't already have these types of products in your line, now is the perfect time to add them in! Use a luxurious shea-butter base, eliminate further irritants by going with our detergent-free ingredients or create glycerin rich products to get yourself started. Market these products specifically for this issue and you'll be sure to see them flying off the shelves as customers search for the answer to their specific dry skin issues.

You may wish to go one step further and cater to your chronic dry skin customers. While some only experience dry skin during these cold months, it just simply gets worse for those with chronic dry skin. Those customers who can slather on effective products 3/4ths of the year are now having the hardest time finding something that will work properly for them as winter wears on. Eliminating surfactants in your products and focusing on ingredients naturally strong in humectants and skinloving oils can be great first steps. Feel free to test out new formulas on existing customers as samples so that you can gauge the effectiveness before producing en masse. This can be a great way to show your customers that you really care about their individual issues while producing a line that can cater to many.

Wholesale Supplies Plus is the perfect place to shop for the ingredients you need to make the perfect dry skin product line and the pages that follow are another great resource for product inspiration. Take a look today and get started on creating or tweaking your products so that you're able to be ready for the slew of customers itching their way to your shop!

HANDMADE COSMETIC ALLIANCE

"Supporting Over 250,000 Small Handmade Cosmetic Microbusiness and the Communities They Serve"

The Handmade Cosmetic Alliance is an alliance of artisans, business owners, cosmetic and soap makers from across the country that want to preserve the freedom to produce and sell handmade soap & cosmetics in the USA

The Handmade Cosmetic Alliance works with federal legislators to preserve handmade cosmetic and soap microbusinesses and the community based, main street jobs they support.

The HCA has four simple messages for legislators:

- 1. Support the creation of a federal microbusiness definition as a small business that together with affiliates, have average annual gross receipts of two million five hundred thousand dollars ($2,500,000) or less over the previous three years, or is a manufacturer with 25 or fewer employees.
- Support the nation's over 250,000 handmade cosmetic companies by providing microbusiness exemptions for facility registration and fees so that these companies may continue to create local jobs and contribute to local economies.
- Support handmade cosmetic microbusinesses by providing exemptions for regulatory paperwork which drives up the cost of doing business, making it nearly impossible to operate a profitable handmade cosmetic business.
- Support handmade cosmetic microbusinesses by providing publicly accessible federal resources as a way to foster growth of these emerging companies in the United States.

AFFORDABLE WAYS TO KEEP CUSTOMERS COMING BACK

Looking for cost effective ways to build your business while maximizing a small marketing budget? Find ways to keep the customers who've already purchased from you coming back for more. Here are some affordable ways to do just that.

Offer convenient payment options.

Accepting credit cards isn't just an added convenience for you and your customers, it can help you compete with larger retailers, and boost your own upsell potential. In the study "Do Payment Mechanisms Change the Way Consumers Perceive Products?" published in the Journal of Consumer Research, researchers found that the intention to pay with either cash or credit can determine whether a consumer concentrates on a product's benefits or its cost

- to the extent that they even choose different products when they know paying with credit is an option.

Customer loyalty programs.

Understanding more about what your customers want, when, why—and for what price point is the to keeping them. While obtaining and analyzing customer data in order to develop customer retention management (CRM) programs was once reserved for larger companies with big budgets and dedicated marketing resources, appealing to your customer's true wants and needs and promoting to them based on that knowledge is no longer cost prohibitive for small business owners. Swipely, for example, acts as a credit card payment processor and CRM tool in one so you can message, thank and reward customers accordingly. If you already have a payment processing system, Swipely promises to" price match" whatever you currently pay that vendor. Belly is another affordable program that allows small businesses to execute customer loyalty and rewards programs, either by giving customer's a physical card, or encouraging them to download the app. (Not sure you're equipped to manage a loyalty program? You can try Belly for free)!

Top of the line customer service.

Offering first-rate customer service doesn't require that you work around the clock or have a large staff—but it can certainly lead to lasting, and invaluable customer relationships. For less than $12 a month, Zopim is a real-time customer-support tool that equips you and your team to communicate with customers via instant messenger, on a smartphone with the Zopim mobile iOS app, while customers browse on your site, or while they're perusing your social media pages. (It also allows you to set hours for when support is available so you don't annoy customers).

Make your messages newsworthy.

The value of how you communicate with customers is less about how much you say, and everything you do with how relevant it is to them at any given time. Instead of sending a blanket email marketing message or promotion every week simply for the sake of sending it, take advantage of the customer data you obtain from the tools mentioned above to target your messages, appropriately—even if it means tweaking language, and even offers, for different segments of your audience to understand more about what they want. For the customers you haven't yet obtained insight about, a tool like CrazyEgg offers look into what customers find of interest on your site, with analytics and site "heat maps." For less than $10 a month, such insight can serve as the foundation for what information you provide on your site, and help you understand where you might elaborate, or focus on certain products, features, and trends in your social media and marketing messages in order to spark more customer conversations, and build relationships.

SURVIVAL TIPS FOR START-UPS

Is the entrepreneurial spirit calling your name? Do you dream of becoming your own boss, reporting only to yourself? Entertain fantasies of crossing the hall to go to work rather than suffering through traffic congestion and delays? Do you have a brilliant idea (or two or three or a thousand) just waiting to be born? Then this article is for you.

Based on years of coaching entrepreneurs, some who had a great start and many who had a rocky beginning, I've put together this list of "musts" for anyone who is considering abandoning the day job and investing hard-earned savings into their business concept.

- 1. If you are still in the workforce, explore the possibility of going part time for at least one year to work on your business part time. This is the best of both worlds. If it's not possible to cut back to part time then make commitments to yourself to reach specific goals and schedule time in the evenings and on weekends to work on your concept. Realistic timelines aren't always easy for a new entrepreneur, so make sure you have someone in your life to help you with the occasional reality check.
- 2. Create a marketing plan. It's critical to take a realistic look at where your customers will come from, how you will reach them, and how long they are likely to remain customers. Many business owners begin with family, friends and neighbors, and that's great, but eventually everyone runs out of those. Market research will help determine whether or not you have a viable idea. Again, do this research with strangers; your mom and sisters have to love your ideas because they love you!
- 3. Work with an accountant or S.C.O.R.E. representative to create financial projections and a budget. Even if you're working out of your home there are always costs associated with running a business. If you can't afford an effective website and search engine optimization (SEO), as well as marketing materials, it's not the time to start your business. Look at how long you can sustain your standard of living on your savings based on a realistic financial projection. Create a best case scenario and a worst case scenario and plot your steps based closer to the worse case picture, just to be safe.
- 4. Put together and meet with an advisory committee. Don't feel intimidated with this; people are typically very happy to help out with a new business. This is a group of peers, friends, family, and/or mentors who each have a strong understanding in a specific area of business. You might have someone who has a creative marketing brain, someone who really knows numbers, and another person who is great with technology or social networking, etc.
- 5. Hire a coach. Most of the people who come to me for coaching have been in business for three or more years. Why? Because new entrepreneurs believe they know exactly what to do and don't anticipate the costly and harmful events that lie ahead. Bad move! Some of my clients have lost hundreds of thousands of dollars due to those unanticipated events. A seasoned coach has helped many people through those nearly devastating times and can help you navigate those waters and even prevent "amateur mistakes". Save yourself a lot of time, money, and grief and work with a coach from the beginning.

- 6. If you are an inventor, understand that obtaining capital for manufacturing is possible but it's a really long stretch to believe that you are going to enter a bank and get a loan because your idea is the next greatest thing since chewing gum. And it may cost tens of thousands just to create your prototype. A lot of people mortgage their home or drain retirement savings to do this. Too often, that money is lost. So make sure you are working with disposable income. To offset the risk, it's probably best to have a financial investor or partner right from the beginning. I highly recommend reading Kim Lavine's book, Mommy Millionaire for a realistic picture of getting your product to market.
- 7. Do you have children at home? Many parents believe that they can develop a business while caring for their children all day long. They believe that they can offset the loss of a full time income by eliminating childcare. It's not impossible to juggle the needs of your children and build a business but it is very stressful and it will take much, much longer to achieve your goals. A weekly schedule is your best friend. Arrange playgroup swaps, nap time, babysitters and other opportunities for uninterrupted work time. Squeezing in phone calls, computer time, and meetings with the kids demanding your attention is one sure fire way to make yourself crazy and the children miserable. Create priorities and a realistic time frame for your business development.
- 8. Make sure you have the support of your spouse or significant other. This is an exciting step in your life, but now you will have other demands on your time and energy. You will need a strong shoulder and your spouse deserves to know if and how your life together may change.

As you can see, the sacrifices of owning your own business are many. But for those of us who truly possess the entrepreneurial spirit, the rewards are countless. Be kind and patient with yourself; this is the most important thing of all. You will make mistakes, we all do. Celebrate each little success and enjoy the journey!

DECISION-MAKING STRATEGIES

Everyone has their own way of making decisions. It's very common to agonize over important decisions that have longterm impacts. In the business world, being decisive is a critical component of success. Sometimes you'll get it right and sometimes you won't, but not making a decision can be just as bad as making the wrong one.

While it's tempting to ignore and defer problems while hoping they'll go away, they almost never do. Here are a few practical methods of attacking decisions in both structured and non-structured environments.

Reject information overload

It's reasonable to want as much information as possible before making any decision. The more data you have, the theory goes, the better the decision will be. it may sound counterintuitive, too much information can be a bad thing. When you have too much data, you start to focus on what may be missing rather than what's in front of you. The tendency is to place more importance on things we don't know, rather than the things we do know.

Spending time researching missing data validates its necessity and usefulness, and justifies delaying a decision until we have all the answers. We don't like uncertainty when making critical decisions, but more information often creates more uncertainty. Great leaders sense the threshold where additional information becomes a liability instead of an asset. They have the ability to focus on the key facts and bottom line impacts of doing one thing versus another. Limit the information to what you absolutely need to make an informed décision.

Use a sounding board

Simply put, don't surround yourself with "yes-men," or people who will agree with you all the time. If you work alone, seek the advice of a friend who tells it like it is and share's advice openly and honestly. Bounce ideas off them and ask them to play devil's advocate even when they might agree with you. The value of this interaction can't be overstated because it will expose issues and angles that you hadn't considered.

Embrace your contrarian

This approach is akin to an inner sounding board. If you have a history of making decisions in a repeated way, it's time to challenge yourself and your default approach. Get out of that rut by using your imagination and escaping the comfort zone that normally constrains your thought process. Confirmation of your wisdom by acting in a predisposed way only blinds you from outside-the-box solutions.

If you're about to make a decision and considering several possibilities, upset the mix by inserting a new option that contradicts what you'd habitually do under similar circumstances. Pretend that you selected the new option and imagine what the aftermath would look like. This forces you to reevaluate all the assumptions that normally would have steered you away from this decision. By reversing your assumptions, you may discover flaws resulting from your personal biases and past routines. Isolate what really matters in the grand scheme of things and reassess your available options.

Switch places

It's hard to separate emotional involvement from making sound business decisions. One way to help get around this is to approach decision-making as though you're advising someone else about what they should do. When advising a friend, your judgment is likely to be less clouded and more objective.

Go through the same process with an imaginary person who's in the exact spot Unlike the sounding board you're in. approach previously discussed, you're not looking for feedback. You're only focused on providing the best advice possible based on all the facts as you understand them.

Pros and Cons

Listing the pluses and minuses of any decision comes naturally. Whether you write them down or not, the reasons why you choose one path over another are at the front of your mind. Some people find it useful to set up a spreadsheet that identifies a decision tree they can use to walk through their evaluation process. It might contain some or all of the following elements:

Positive and negative impacts of each decision option

Cost and schedule associated with each

Qualitative ranking of all options

Expected reaction outside company (customers, suppliers, etc.) Charts or graphs of applicable data that are key to your decision

If you create a spreadsheet, keep it simple. If it gets too complicated, you'll fall into the trap of over-analyzing it to death and defeat its original purpose. The idea is to display your choices in a logical format that enables you to review each option and consistently compare it to the others.

Roadmap

Effective decision-making is a process of analysis without paralysis. If you aren't comfortable relying on your instincts and experience, here are some steps that may

Frame the decision to be made in simple

- Assemble only the relevant data and facts that will be a basis for your
- Set a deadline for making the decision

4. If possible, brainstorm options with people you trust Evaluate options based on pros and cons, cost, and overall impacts to your company

6. Challenge your assumptions, even if you believe they're rock solid Once you've reviewed the options bottom-up, look at them from top-down

- Avoid compromise as this rarely leads to the best answer
- Sleep on it and let it simmer; then select the optimal option

Explain your decision to those who will be impacted, and closely manage its implementation. Perform follow-up as needed to monitor the results, and learn from your mistakes.

Summary

One element of decision-making involves minimizing risk and maximizing reward. Small business owners are constantly bombarded with scenarios where they must make hard choices that could have huge consequences. The more experience you have doing this, the more confident you'll become. You'll develop your own style and methods that work best for you.

When making important decisions, there's no substitute for common sense, logic, and good instincts. Don't overburden yourself with statistics and extraneous information that may cloud your better judgment. Don't delay making the tough calls. Make the best-informed decision you can and move

GUIDELINES FOR FORMULATING WITH HERBS & SPICES

Natural ingredients are in high demand in cosmetic formulations. [1] As food science plays a big part in cosmetic formulation, it makes sense that food products are making a splash in cosmetics. Because of this trend, we are seeing a surge of herbal plant additives and spices in skincare products.

Although many botanical additives are filled with vitamins, minerals and antioxidants, these ingredients do not always have the same effect when applied topically as they do when taken internally as a dietary supplement. Just because an herbal supplement has a certain effect when ingested, does not mean it will react the same on the skin, much less be absorbed in the same way or at the same rate. In fact, some natural plant additives are skin irritants. Allergic reactions and skin sensitization can occur when certain herbs are applied to the skin. [2] Skin irritations can appear in the form of a rash, blotches and itching, and in some cases blisters may appear. Natural product formulators should do their due diligence when selecting herbal additives for cosmetics products. This includes choosing botanicals with a history of use in skincare applications and including warnings to avoid applying these products to open wounds, cuts and abrasions.

Sometimes, choosing a more diluted version of a botanical can help to minimize reactions. Rather than using pure essential oils or pure powdered plant material, these raw materials should be diluted to manageable levels. Most raw material suppliers offer safe usage rates and suggestions for proper use of individual raw materials. [3] Diluted versions of botanicals can include tinctures, infusions, extracts, hydrosols and nature-identical compounds. When in doubt, check it out through research and verifiable means. After all, it's your company and reputation on the line if the end user has a reaction to your product.

Many herbal additives can impart a natural color to your formulations. Although in many cases this is a bonus, the FDA does not currently recognize all herbal additives as colorants and therefore they cannot be listed as a colorant on your product label. You may list the herbal additive by its International Nomenclature of Cosmetics Ingredients (INCI) name since the inherent function is as an additive, not a colorant. Some botanicals are so good at imparting a color, that they will dye skin when used at nominal levels. Turmeric [4] and henna are good examples of these types of colorful botanicals. When formulating with any plant materials that affect the color of the product, be sure to test your upper and lower limits to determine if the botanical will affect product stability as well as skin color and the color of fabrics such as washcloths and towels.

Some plants, in nature, have natural antimicrobial and antibacterial activity. Novice formulators should not rely on these items to preserve their finished products without challenge testing. There are several commercial preservatives on the market that do not contain controversial ingredients and many of these are acceptable for most any formulator. It is irresponsible to assume that a specific botanical or a combination of plant materials will preserve any formulation from bacterial and microbial growth. The proof is in the herbal pudding, so to speak, so back up any claims with proof via challenge testing.

Just because an item exists in nature, does not mean it is acceptable for your cosmetics formulation. Toxicodendron radicans (poison ivy) is natural, but who wants it on their skin? It is possible to formulate a completely "botanical" product, however, compromises are required. These compromises include increased cost (due to product testing), decreased shelf-life, inconsistencies from batch to batch and other issues.
